Dear The Federal Communications Commission,

I do not want to pay more for my telephone service! I strongly urge you to reject a flat fee proposal that would change how contributions are made to the Universal Service Fund. This proposal could make my current service unaffordable while allowing businesses to have these benefits built on the backs of the average American worker.

Under the flat fee proposal you are considering, people who make few long distance calls would pay the same as people or businesses that make many calls. In other words, low-volume and primarily residential customers would bear the same universal service fund burden as a high-volume residential or business customers. This is terribly unfair!

Since I am disabled and would not be able to go for help should my car break down or I get into any kind of accident, I use my wireless phone for safety and security in emergency situations only. I don't want to lose these benefits so that big businesses can pay less than their fair share. I strongly urge you to reject the proposal to move the USF collection system to a flat-fee.

Keep the USF Fair!

Sincerely,

Rachel Molnar
